

An Esquire Deposition Solutions Webinar

Are you prepared to move your depositions forward – online? Beware: It takes more than a webcam and an internet connection to safely and securely undertake the process. A complete understanding of what remote options are available and how they work is critical to avoiding the pitfalls of inaccurately hosting depositions online.

Understandably, as the volume of litigation continues to climb and the availability of professional court reporters continues to dwindle, law firms and corporations need reliable alternatives to soundly producing the written record.

Now, more than ever, attorneys and their teams must inject new efficiencies into the way depositions are managed. There are two reliable concepts that every team should consider:

Remote Deposition - Videoconferencing

Witness and Court Reporter are in the same room while members of the legal teams may be remote

Remote Reporter - Videoconferencing

Witness, Court Reporter and entire legal team is remote (As permitted by state laws and regulations)

Take immediate action to become proficient in managing your cases online! Attend this one-hour complimentary session and witness first-hand how important cloud-based functions work in remote depositions, such as real-time transcription of the testimony, electronic exhibits, secure chat features, video recording, and more. In addition, we will cover what you need to know about working with a remote court reporter to ensure that the record is captured accurately and efficiently.

Get answers to these top five remote depositions and remote court reporter questions:

- I. What is a remote deposition?
- 2. How can we ensure videoconferencing technology works smoothly?
- 3. What are the benefits of hosting depositions remotely and using a remote court reporter?
- 4. Why can I trust that a remote court reporter will accurately produce the record?
- 5. Are remote depositions and remote court reporters legal in my state?